Disability Inclusion

Support Co-Workers With Visible and Invisible Disabilities

According to a 2022 Census.gov survey, 9.8 million Americans with a disability are employed. Chances are high you or your co-worker have a disability. It can be visible, like an amputation or nervous system disease, or invisible, like autism or fibromyalgia. Find online resources in the Well-Being Center or choose counseling or coaching to help support and address disabilities.

Disability Inclusion

The Center for Disease Control and Prevention defines disability inclusion as including people with disabilities in everyday activities and encouraging them to have roles similar to their peers without disabilities.
